Art Unit: 2836

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negatived by the manner in which the invention was made.

This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

Claims 1-6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Applicants' Admitted Prior Figure 4 in view of Harsch et al. (4,327,692).

The Prior Art Figure 4 of Applicants' Admitted Prior Art discloses an overvoltage protection coil control circuit comprising a Hall sensor (50), a pulse generator (52), two driver circuit (Q1), (Q2) (BJTs for Claim 4) each extending from an output of the pulse generator and to a corresponding coil (L1), (L2) and use of an amplifier (51) (for Claims 5 & 6), but does not appear to disclose use of a single zener diode connected to power supply with its cathode (neg. pole) connected to two diodes (each for a driver). Harsch et al. teach in Figure 6, a driver (12) controlling a coil (10) wherein a quenching circuit is connected on one end between the driver and respective coil and to power supply on the other end. Figure 3a is taught as being an appropriate quenching circuit for the box (18) of Figure 6. It would have been obvious to incorporate the teachings of Harsche et al. as a means to return some of the power back to the supply, eliminate the use of one zener diode and absorb the excess energy in the coil in a controlled fashion, thereby easily predicting and reproducing de-excitation time for a controlled coil, lending the design to applications requiring a higher degree of control and precision. The use of MOSFETs for the drivers would have been obvious for the increased switching speeds and thermal stability over that of BJTs.

The Prior Art made of record (see PTO-892) and not relied upon is considered pertinent to Applicants' Disclosure.
